W. T. AIKINS AWARD FOR EXCELLENCE IN INDIVIDUAL TEACHING PERFORMANCE IN CLERKSHIP

ELIGIBILITY
Any faculty member who teaches or taught undergraduate students in the clerkship part of the undergraduate medical education program (lectures, seminars, workshops, tutorials, portfolio, clinical skills, interviewing skills or in electives) is eligible for nomination.

PLEASE NOTE that teaching performance in other programs, for example Arts and Science, graduate, or, post-graduate medical programs will not be considered for the W. T. Aikins award.

CRITERIA
The following will be considered in reviewing each nominee:

1) Commitment:
   a) quantity of teaching
   b) accessibility to students
   c) evidence of self-development in teaching methods (e.g. course attended)
   d) research and publications on teaching methods

2) Excellence in communication skills

3) Subject mastery

4) Ability to organize material, emphasize principles, and present

5) Demonstrated ability to stimulate students:
   a) encourages interest in and enthusiasm for subject
   b) displays good rapport with students
   c) leads students to think critically, analytically and independently, and to organize their own learning

6) Effective use of appropriate teaching resources and educational innovations

7) Innovative, creative and experimental teaching methods

8) Contribution as a suitable role model

Letters that are the most helpful address the criteria for the award and present evidence supporting the nominee's excellence in those criteria.

Updated September 2021